Gas Detection dog

How the revolutionary Maribo-dog can save your company millions of dollars and why the Maribo-dog is the most advanced and most cost effective detection method on today's market!

There are many methods used on today's market on how to detect gas leaks and prevent a potential catastrophe which can not only destroy a company's reputation, cost millions in damage and lawsuits but more importantly cost peoples' lives.

The Maribo-dog has been trained for one cause and one purpose only, to deliver the most reliable and superior gas detection method on today's market at the lowest cost to the client.

A brief introduction of the Maribo-dog

Maribo AB is a family owned company which was started in 1993. Since then Maribo has developed dogs for various tasks in the Police Authorities, the Armed Forces and companies in the civil market. Since 1996 Maribo AB has worked together with Swedish gas-distributors to develop the most reliable and cost effective method of detecting gas leaks along the low pressure distribution system whether it is above

The Maribo-dog is the development of the reliable Swedish minefield dog which by experts has been trained by the strictest requirements in the world. Its specific ability to detect these leaks has proven superior to any current and known methods.

One of many things which sets aside the Maribo-dog from the competitors is that it will only detect active presence of a specific VOC-substance (Volatile Organic Compounds). This substance exists most commonly in the interval C1 – C4.

The dogs highly trained sense of smell is much more sensitive than any known instrument used for gas leak detection on the market today. They will detect gas substances at levels far lower than ppb-level.

These dogs are developed for the purpose of detecting only active presence of one of the following VOC-substances:

- Tetrahydrothiophane (THT)
- Secondary Butyl Mercaptan (SBM)
- Tertiary Butyl Mercaptan (TBM)
- Isopropyl Mercaptan (IPM)
- Normal Propyl Mercaptan (NPM) ▶ ground or below. This is now our specialty and Maribo AB work in accordance with the strict quality standard SS-EN ISO 9001:2000.

Swedish gas-distributors and the local government have demanded the highest level of safety and accuracy since the gas companies and the government and surrounding infrastructures can't afford even one single accident due to gas leakage. The special method of using the Maribo-dog to detect gas leaks has proven more than successful over the years and has moreover surpassed the strict political and economical regulations in all areas.

Above mentioned substances doesn't exist freely in the nature and are therefore regarded as exclusive substances. Maribo AB doesn't train the dogs to detect the presence of Methane gas since Methane exists freely in the nature. This is of great importance for the client, both financially and safety wise. For instance, the client doesn't need to pay for unnecessary construction which is very common when other methods are utilized.

Swedish gas-distributors has now for several years successfully used the Maribo-dog to detect gas leaks on their low pressure distribution system above and below ground and the Maribo method is very well documented and tested.
